It is a wonderful Catholic tradition to request a Mass Intention for loved ones; living or deceased. In fact, asking for Mass intention for the deceased is not only Catholic tradition, it is biblical (2 Maccabees 12: 38-46).

Mass intention is also a wonderful gift for any special occasion: birthday, anniversary, in thanksgiving for a prayer answered, etc. Mass intention donations are $10 each. Please call the parish office to schedule a Mass Intention.

FROM THE DESK OF OUR PASTORAL ADMINISTRATOR

Fr. Emerson Rodriguez Delgado

What If Happiness Starts at the End of Ourselves?

Aristotle once said that every human being is chasing happiness, and most of us know he's right. The problem isn't desire for joy; it's where we keep trying to find it. We reach for whatever promises relief, belonging, or control, yet the very things we chase often leave us more restless than before.

That's why Jesus' words in the Beatitudes land with such surprising force. He looks at an unexpected group of people and calls them "blessed." Not lucky, nor comfortable, not hashtag-living-the dream, but deeply happy. It raises the question: if these are the happy ones, why does their life sound so hard?

Consider the list. The poor in spirit. Those who mourn. The meek. The hungry for justice. The insulted. The persecuted. Even the seemingly "positive" traits—mercy, purity of heart, peacemaking—are difficult when lived out. So why call this group blessed? At first it can sound like delayed gratification: your reward will be great in heaven. But Jesus isn't saying "suffer now to be happy later." The Beatitudes aren't about celebrating pain; they're about humility—a new way of seeing and belonging to God. As Mother Teresa put it, we must empty ourselves to receive a blessing, because even God cannot fill what's already full. Want happiness? Seeking holiness? Spoiler: The front door is humility.

The Beatitudes sit at the heart of Jesus' teaching, and show us what he himself looks like. And the first Beatitude is the entryway into the whole kingdom life: "Happy are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Only the first and the eighth mention "the kingdom," like bookends, suggesting that everything in between reveals the kingdom's inner logic and way of life.

And yes, it's counter-cultural. Our world preaches a different gospel: win, get rich, and get admired. Even in the Old Testament can seem to equate blessing with success. Today we often skip the "God" part and chase the prize ourselves. But Jesus is more realistic: wealth and success can wreck a person, and strengths can become weaknesses. And the opposite is true: what looks like defeat can become a victory. Jesus lived that truth, crucified, then raised.

Meister Eckhart went so far as to say poverty of spirit is more foundational than love. Sounds extreme, but he meant this: without humility, we can only love selectively—our people, our tribe, the ones who don't annoy us. Christ's love is open-handed, self-giving, fearless. His love begins where our ego ends—and let's be real, most of us could use a smaller ego and a bigger heart.

This is why the Beatitudes don't look like economic or political strength. They are intentionally counter-cultural. Jesus isn't just redefining happiness; he's giving us a path to it. The Greek word 'makarios,' usually translated "blessed," means a serene, untouchable joy. Not the absence of sorrow, but a joy deeper than sorrow.

To live the Beatitudes means seeking God with an honest, uncluttered heart. In conflict, loss, or confusion, the invitation is the same: turn toward God. Not only with prayers, but with choices, habits, and relationships. We are "blessed" because we are held by the One who is joy Himself.

The first group of Beatitudes—poverty of spirit, mourning, meekness, hunger for righteousness—exposes the emptiness of our false gods: money, pleasure, power, fame. "Blessed are the poor in spirit" isn't a praise of economic poverty; it's a call to detachment. Everything is gift. Once we see that, we can finally live freely.

The second group—mercy, purity of heart, peacemaking—shows what a transformed life looks like from the inside out. Mercy steps into another's suffering. Purity of heart seeks God without mixed motives. Peacemaking refuses the easy path of contempt.

And then the final Beatitude: "Blessed are those who are persecuted for righteousness' sake." Jesus isn't glorifying martyrdom. He is describing freedom. As Paul wrote, "I have been crucified with Christ..." Meaning: the world loses its power over a heart no longer clings to itself.

In the end, the Beatitudes teach abundant living: living fully and freely, whatever the circumstances. The path forward isn't spiritual heroics but humble openness: letting Jesus soften what has hardened in us and letting God shape us into people of mercy, courage, and peace.

If you want a place to begin, try this: choose one small, hidden act of mercy. No credit. No applause. Just love. Then pay attention to what happens in your heart. That's where freedom begins.

PRAY FOR OUR MILITARY

The men and women who serve in the armed forces do so with a sacrificial love for our country and the world. Lifting them up in prayer to our Lord must be our humble, and yet great support for them.

Lord, may your love encircle our military as they work across the world to install justice and peace for all. And be their hope through the difficulties and stress they face each day.

ST. ANTHONY OF PADUA CATHOLIC SCHOOL

St. Anthony of Padua Catholic School is renewing its academic program to better serve the needs of children as persons—intellectually, morally, spiritually, and developmentally. This transition to a multi-age model strengthens our Catholic mission, supports excellence through mastery, and reflects our identity as a small, intentional learning community ordered toward the good of the human person created in the image and likeness of God.

Rather than organizing learning strictly by age or grade, students are grouped according to developmental readiness and mastery of skills. This allows instruction to be more responsive, more personal, and more humane.

The multi-age classroom places the needs of the child as a person at the center of the academic program, recognizing that children develop at different rates and learn best when instruction responds to where they truly are—academically, socially, and emotionally. By emphasizing mastery rather than pace, this model calls forth excellence, giving students the time and support needed to grasp foundational skills fully while maintaining appropriate challenge without undue pressure. Flexible groupings within each classroom allow teachers to know students more deeply and provide individualized attention, while the mixed-age environment fosters leadership, responsibility, and mutual support as older students mentor younger peers.

A Distinctively Catholic Identity

This model sets St. Anthony of Padua Catholic School apart from other Catholic schools in the area. It harnesses our strengths:

- A small, intentional community
- A mission-focused culture
- An education centered on the dignity of the human person

Child-Centered by Design

The multi-age classroom places the needs of the child as a person at the center of the academic program. Children develop at different rates, and learning is most effective when instruction responds to where a student truly is—academically, socially, and emotionally.

Excellence Through Mastery

This model calls forth excellence by emphasizing mastery rather than pace. Students are given the time and support needed to fully grasp foundational skills before moving forward. Instruction is developmentally appropriate, ensuring challenge without undue pressure.

More Individualized Attention

Multi-age classrooms allow teachers to work with students in flexible groupings and to know each child more deeply. Older students reinforce learning by mentoring younger peers, while younger students benefit from strong models of leadership and responsibility.

Responsible Stewardship of Resources

Reducing the number of instructional classrooms frees financial and human resources. This allows the school to strengthen essential support roles that the current grade-level model requires, such as:

- School Mission Operations Manager
- Advancement, Enrollment & Marketing
- Facilities Coordinator

The result is a school that forms students not only for academic success, but for lives of virtue, service, and faith. This shift promotes long-term sustainability while preserving academic quality. We will know that we have succeeded in our mission when we:

- Actively proclaim the kerygma and promote our Catholic faith, tradition, and history.
- Protect the primacy of parents as the first educators and the family as the first school of the child, actively pursuing harmony between the Church, school, and home.
- Revere the nature and dignity of the human person as male and female, body-soul unities created for heaven in God's image and likeness.
- Employ curricula, pedagogy, and human formation rooted in the Catholic tradition of liberal learning that inspire wonder and awe, and lead students to encounter and behold Jesus Christ, the Logos.
- Hire, equip, and retain dedicated men and women as leaders and educators who are disciples of Jesus, who give a joyful counter-cultural witness, and who have a relentless commitment to our mission.
- Form a Christian community rooted in charity whose joyful daily common life and personal practices give life to a sacramental and counter-cultural vision of the world and inspire its members to abide in relationship with God, the Church, and each other.

In Christ the Beloved,

Brian Long

Principal

St. Anthony of Padua Catholic School
